

Dog and Cat

Once lived a dog and a cat. They were strays. The dog had gray fur with black spots. The cat was white as snow. They were walking, and not watching where they were going, and bonked heads. They made sure each other was ok. The dog asked "where are you going"? The dog barked. The cat meowed "the park" so am I. Can I join you?" "Barked the dog, Absolutely!" Meowed the cat. Soon they got going. When they were almost there a human came and picked up the cat and walked to a big, white, nasty van with cages inside. The dog thought "should I save her or should I go to paradise. He made up his mind. He sprinted toward the van and jumped on a ledge and held on for dear life as the van picked up speed. After 45 dog minutes they came to a stop. As the man got out of the van the dog ran under the van so the human didn't see him. The human picked up the cat and held her over the fire. The dog sprinted to the man and bit him in the leg. The dog and cat ran away, but they could still see the commotion. Soon the police showed up (although no one called them) and the human got arrested. The dog and cat walked to the park. At the park there were dogs, cats, and kid humans. Wow. Meowed the cat. Soon a human came over and put a collar on the cat, then the dog. The cat's collar said Poochi on it, and the dog's collar said Ochi. Soon they got carried to a palace (to them). They got shelter, they got food, they also got a cozy bed to sleep in instead of newspaper. "This, is, awesome!" Barked the dog. "This is the life". Meowed the cat relaxingly. Before long they were both asleep.

THE END